The Indiana men came here without lefinite plans for the nomination of Fairbanks, but a command came out of some where that it was desired to have a man from Indiana, and that the man must be Fairbanks.

THE INDIANA ICICLE WAS THE INEVITABLE.

It is a fact that there was no organized move for Fairbanks in his own State delegation until Monday, when it began to appear that the "drift," as definite direction by the machine was called, had set in toward the Indiana icicle, as some Posey County humorist has named him.
